About Bhopal:

Bhopal is a city in the central Indian state of Madhya Pradesh. It's one of India's greenest city. Bhopal is known as the "city of lakes"; its name is a derivation of Bhoj Tal ("Bhoj's Lake"), a lake constructed by Bhoj, a Hindu raja, in the 11th century. Today that lake is the Upper Bhopal Lake (Bada Talab), which is connected to the Lower Bhopal Lake (Chhota Talab) by an aqueduct. Around the lakes are several palaces and a fort dating from about 1728. Bhopal has several mosques, including the 19th-century Taj-ul-Masjid, the largest mosque in India.

Other significant attractions in and around Bhopal include Fatehgarh Fort; Lakshminarayan Temple; Bharat Bhawan, a multipurpose arts centre; the Museum of Man, an open-air exhibit of replicas of different Indian tribal dwellings; and Van Vihar National Park, a zoological park.. It is well connected by railways, highways and airways to various part of India.

Objectives and Scope of the Conference:

The major objective of this conference is to provide a platform for professionals (students, teachers, and researcher) to exchange knowledge, discuss the latest advancements, and address challenges related to drug development, manufacturing, and regulation. This conference may encourage collaboration between pharmaceutical companies, academic institutions, government agencies, and non-profit organizations to drive innovation and improve healthcare delivery. Overall, the goal of this conference is to advance the knowledge, practice, and future development of the pharmaceutical product in a way that benefits public health and well-being.
